

Hit & Run strike again

Pick On

FRI, 7/25

Bluegrass bands naturally take folks by storm: The music they play is handspun yet motor-driven, a well-oiled machine of sound produced by men and women with flying fingers and high, lonesome voices. So you know something's got to be up when one bluegrass band suddenly surpasses all the others. Here in Colorado, that band is Hit & Run, which nabbed first place at last year's RockyGrass Bluegrass Festival band competition just three months after forming. The group struck gold again last month at the bluegrass fest in Telluride. While this year's RockyGrass -- where the players return today as conquering heroes -- is sold out (natch), Hit & Run will perform again this evening at 9 p.m. at Oskar Blues, 303 Main Street in Lyons. Or catch the band at the Fox Theatre, 1135 13th Street in Boulder, on Thursday, July 31 (call 303-443-3399 for tickets). For more on Hit & Run, log on to www.hitandrunbluegrass.com. -- Susan Froyd

westword.com | originally published: July 24, 2003